

Corinna Sayn-Wittgenstein

From: Paul Bon <pbon12321@gmail.com>
Sent: 17 May 2012 17:33
To: Corinna Sayn-Wittgenstein
Subject: Security

Dear Princess,

We have come to know, from various sources and different ways, that the services we have been providing you and your entourage (home and office) for some time now, are not necessary any longer.

As you may remember, our goal at the time we got involved in this subject, was to avoid that any strange person could get into your premises, or could try to get close enough to you to invade your privacy.

After some time, we are sure that you are not under any kind of surveillance and there is not any physical threat to you. Besides, although we have not had any access to your IT system, we are sure that the company that is dealing with your IT security has a long record of outstanding effectiveness.

On the other hand, we have seen a constant suspicion from you and your employees on any activity our people need to develop in your premises.

I understand your feelings at this time in your life when many of the people around you may try to get something from you. But, that has never been our case.

Anyway, I understand that our duty has been fulfilled, so I will let the security company know that, from now on, any matter related to your security will be dealt exclusively with you or the person you designate for that purpose. We are not involved on this any more.

One last recommendation. It would be advisable that, until the moment you send the black boxes with the documents to the place of your chose, you keep a security guard in your premises.

Of course, HM has been informed of this intention.

With my warmest regards and consideration,

P Bon